- a dividing wall separating the suction chamber from the motor compartment and including an air-directing funnel;
- an electric motor disposed within the motor compartment;
- a centrifugal blower wheel rotationally driven by the motor;
- a blower housing having a inflow opening and an inner side and being configured to form a directed air stream, said blower housing surrounding said centrifugal blower wheel, said centrifugal blower wheel and said inner side of said blower housing defining an air gap therebetween; and a seal body having an inner sealing ring surrounding the inflow opening and a buffer part extending radially outwardly from the sealing ring toward an outer periphery, the seal body forming a seal between the blower housing and the dividing wall and the seal body being disposed in the inflow opening and substantially filling said air gap between the centrifugal blower wheel and the inner side of said blower housing;

wherein the seal body is formed from an elastic material, the sealing ring having a first elasticity value, the buffer part having a second elasticity value being different than the first elasticity value.

24. (Canceled)

Claim 21 has been amended to include the limitations of claim 24, and claim 24 has been accordingly canceled. Combination claim 21 now includes the patentable subject matter similar to subcombination claim 1, rendering the subcombination essential to the combination. See MPEP 806.05(c).
